An Ex-Magnetite Lody Wins a Oase Against a Pension Agent Wilbur C. Benton of Newport in the United States Court at Covincian Court Pension. Four Indictments again at him were triefd, only to end in his sequittal, and Benton and his friends were confident be would come off scatheless. But the encuries he made in the time of his success have been relentless and worked all the harder to get him in the toils of the law. The witness who appeared against him in his last trial was Wrs. Bridget Manion, the widow of Michael Manion, a deceased soldier. Prior to their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Manion, the latter being a Miss Burns, lived in Mayville. The widow now lives in Covington. She toid a straighforward story, and in her appearance and manners gave evidence that she was telling what could be depended on. She said that when Benton got her claim allowed he came to her and asked if she would not give him something extra besides the fee for what he had done in securing it. She willingly promised, she said, not knowing that she had any right to refuse. When the check was sent on for the money she was to gut—$2,000—he was on hand to tocome the sheat, did not deny receiving the money, but insisted that it was a free and voluntary gift from Mrs. Manion in appreciation of his services, and without any suggestion on his part. There were no other witnesses to testify in the affair. The jury, after an hour's deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty. Mr. Benton was considerably affected by the outcome. He remained in the Courthouse, and around it during the time the jury was out, suffering considerable suspense. The pensity is a fine of $500 or two years' imprisonment, to both, but the Judge fined him $300.
